

Jackie Reeves Senior Consultant

As a coach and trainer, Jackie Reeves combines her wealth of professional experience with the innovative approach that makes each seminar—and each participant – individually energized.

Whether speaking to or instructing 1 -- or 101 -- I believe in making each person feel as if I'm focusing solely on them, their concerns, and their challenges. In preparation for any assignment, I try to tap into the hearts and minds of the audience to learn what will make a difference for them – both personally and professionally – and then provide skill sets to meet their needs.

Since 1978, Jackie has designed, developed and delivered corporate seminars in presentation skills, executive & professional presence, interpersonal skills, leadership and team development, diversity/sensitivity awareness, managing conflict, performance management and others. Client accolades reflect Jackie's insight, compassion and energy, which carry over into her role as a noted motivational speaker at seminars, conferences and meetings.

Doing what I do requires an intuitive nature and a genuine concern to help others learn, grow and succeed. What I do best is make people feel comfortable by balancing knowledge and personal experience with a sense of humor and a 'learning can be fun' mentality.

Jackie draws on her broad education for Nyman clients: Master's Degree in language from the University of Arkansas, and a designation as a Professional in Human Resources (PHR) from the Society for Human Resource Management. She holds certifications in training and program design and development and is a member of The American Society for Training and Development (ASTD).
